

Agile Assessment

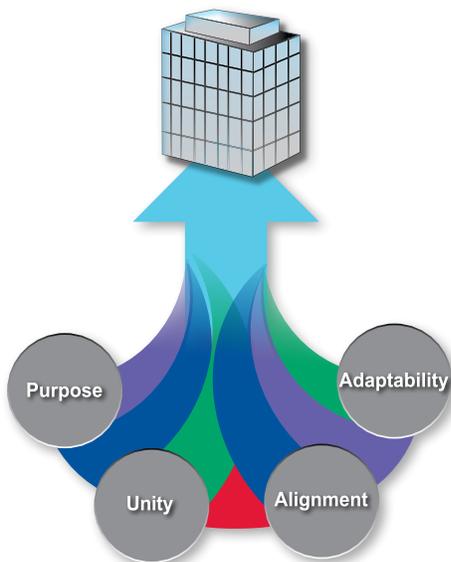

Your Agile Initiative Is On Track...Or Is It?

Getting the Most of Your Agile Investments

So your organization has invested significant time, money, and resources in an Agile transformation. What have the results been? How do you know if the results are continually improving Agile traction within your organization and increasing business value?

While individual Agile projects may be successful, the effect on the enterprise can be chaotic—management loses insight into the progress of the project and resorts to very non-Agile, traditional oversight. Achieving enterprise agility is a process; you need to understand where you are at a given point and time in that process, what your destination looks like, and how fast you want, or are able, to get there.

Salient CRGT, a leader in innovative Agile capabilities and a Scaled Agile Framework (SAFe) practitioner, understands that sometimes Agile initiatives begin with great intentions and later fall off the tracks without warning. To avoid this, we offer a unique three-tiered Agile Assessment: a comprehensive study that examines the vertical and horizontal alignment of Agile practices within your organization, identifying risks and areas for improvement.

Agile is much more than linear development, and knowing how to effectively and efficiently improve your Agile approach both vertically and horizontally enables you to make the best return from your IT investments. Salient CRGT can help you instill Agile processes in your organization, and show you how to increase their business value through correct application.

The Salient CRGT Approach

Software development teams working within an Agile environment depend on flexible processes, the ability to adapt, and a confluence of purpose, unity, and approach with stakeholders across the organization. Salient CRGT knows that any organizational gaps can mean lost opportunities for rapid development in the short term, and potentially lead to lost revenue over the long term. We can help strengthen your value stream through our Agile Assessment.

Salient CRGT's unique Agile Assessment examines three organizational areas simultaneously: executives, teams, and tools. Each is a critical element of Agile success. We assess each area to ensure that the most comprehensive information is identified, captured, and brought forward to demonstrate that your Agile effort is on track. Our credentialed Agile experts will establish a road map and recommendations to remove procedural and other roadblocks in order to maximize your success.
